STEVE BULLOCK
GOVERNOR

ANGELA McLEAN
LT. GOVERNOR

September 15, 2014

I am pleased to present to you "Partners in Building a Stronger Montana: 2014 State-Tribal Relations Report."

This report captures a moment in time of Montana's steady, long-term commitment to support diverse and strong reservation economies, invest in quality education programs, and challenge government to become more effective and efficient.

The State of Montana and the Tribal Nations have accomplished so much by working together, as partners. This relationship is central to bringing needed change. Many collaborative projects featured in this report are already having a positive impact in Indian communities: communication channels are being established, barriers are being removed, and the horizon is opening toward new opportunities.

In this second year of my administration, we have continued to develop and implement strategies to address issues identified in the course of our listening tour in Indian Country. I am proud of the work being done and am committed to continuing this progress.

BETTER JOBS

The sovereign status and youthful demographics of Montana's Indian Nations present real opportunities for reservations to become regional economic engines. Yet for many reasons Indian Country continues to experience concentrated unemployment, job scarcity, low wages, and inactive business sectors. The unemployment rate for reservations in Montana has historically ranged from 15% to 30% according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, or from 25% to 75% according to the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Whichever methodology is used, these unemployment rates starkly reveal structural economic imbalances that cannot be swiftly "stimulated" into recovery. While solutions may not be simple or quick, real economic growth on reservations is an urgent priority of the Bullock Administration. Montana remains wholly committed to its partnership with tribal governments and the private sector in eliminating barriers and seizing opportunities to facilitate successful business ventures on reservations. In this year's report we feature the Main Street Montana program and some of the many projects already having an impact in Indian Country. A complete inventory of economic development programs involving tribal governments can be found in Appendix "B".

MAIN STREET MONTANA IN INDIAN COUNTRY

In 2014, Governor Steve Bullock released his Main Street Montana Plan. The Plan is a blueprint for achieving expanded business opportunities, increased wages, and greater prosperity throughout Montana.

In creating the Plan, the Governor tasked Lieutenant Governor Angela McLean with leading a team from his Administration to meet with each of Montana's tribal governments. Over the course of summer 2014, the Lieutenant Governor, along with a team including the Director of the Governor's Office of Indian Affairs and the program manager for the State-Tribal Economic Development Commission, conducted meetings at each of the reservations and with representatives of the Little Shell Tribe.

At those meetings, Tribal leaders, educators, business persons and community members came together to identify priority objectives for economic growth and workforce development in Indian Country. In total, more than 200 people participated in the meetings. In addition to the many specific priorities identified by each Tribal Nation, a common set of broad objectives emerged: (1) improve educational and workforce development opportunities; (2) develop infrastructure in Indian Country; and (3) increase access to capital.

“Montana’s Tribal Nations not only play an important role in influencing the culture and heritage of our state, but they are crucial to our economic prosperity.”

—Lieutenant Governor Angela McLean

“During this austere time for the Blackfeet Reservation I find hope participating in the Main Street Montana Project community event with the State of Montana, the Blackfeet Tribe, [and the] Blackfeet Community College... to develop a plan to create education, economic, and community growth opportunities.”

Tribes have already taken the lead in brainstorming strategies within each of these core areas. Increasing dual credit opportunities in the K-12 school system, early childhood education, new apprenticeship programs, and state recognition of tribal certification programs will enhance workforce development. Improving road, water, power and communications infrastructure will provide the foundation needed for sustained business creation. State recognition of tribal Limited Liability Companies (LLCs), tribal member participation in financial literacy programs, and public-private partnerships to ensure tribal borrowers qualify for loans will increase access to capital. These are just a few of the innovative ideas generated during the Mainstreet Montana roundtables. Indian Country is ready to move aggressively to establish the conditions necessary for sustained economic growth, and Montana is ready to move with it.

The Montana HealthCARE grant will facilitate innovative private-public partnerships to ensure our two-year and community colleges, universities, and tribal colleges together with our state workforce systems are responsive to the needs of healthcare employers as well as job seekers in their local communities.”

—Governor Steve Bullock

THE WORK HAS ALREADY BEGUN

IMPROVING EDUCATIONAL AND WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Montana Dual Credit Incentive Program—Beginning in the Fall of 2014, high school instructors who teach dual credit high school/college courses can earn coupons for tuition-free college credits. These coupons may be used at any public or tribal college or university in Montana and are transferable to anyone. The incentive program will make college opportunities more accessible and affordable for American Indian students and families.

Montana HealthCARE (Creating Access to Rural Education)

Grant—The U.S. Department of Labor has awarded Montana colleges, including tribal colleges, a $15 million grant to expand education and job opportunities in the healthcare field. The grant is expected to result in the completion of nearly 2,500 new certificates and two-year degrees in allied health and nursing.

Blackfeet Community College Nursing Program

The Montana Department of Labor and Industry's Board of Nursing approved a new nursing program at the Blackfeet Community College, which graduated its first class of Licensed Practical Nurses (LPN) in May of 2014.

Issksiniip Project—The Issksiniip Project at the Blackfeet Community College provides participants with internship and job placement opportunities in the healthcare profession. Through a Memorandum of Understanding with Blackfeet Community College, the Cut Bank Job Service assists in enrolling Issksiniip participants in job training programs and with career placement.

Lake County Job Service—The Lake County Job Service is working with the Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes (CSKT) as a partner in the Sustainable Economic Development Project of the Administration for Native Americans, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Through this three-year grant, the Job Service and CSKT will implement a pilot workforce training program for tribal members in identified areas of industry growth.

DEVELOPING INFRASTRUCTURE IN INDIAN COUNTRY

Rail Spur Development—The Fort Peck Tribes are using Montana Department of Commerce Indian Country Economic Development (ICED) grant funds to assist in rehabilitating and placing into service a rail spur to be owned and operated by the Tribes (dba "Bison Rail"). The spur, located in Poplar, Montana, will relieve railroad bottlenecks in North Dakota and enable Fort Peck to become a major shipping point for supplies and commodities moving into and out of the Bakken oil fields. The spur opened for business on September 5, 2014.

Cell Phone Communications—The Chippewa Cree Tribe has identified access to mobile wireless communication as essential for business growth and development, as well as for public safety and the delivery of human services. With assistance from a Department of Commerce ICED grant, the Tribe is developing a cell tower site on St. Pierre Ridge. In addition to providing critical communications infrastructure, lease payments from cell phone companies will provide tribal revenues.

Housing Development—The Housing Credit program of the Montana Department of Commerce provides incentives for investment of equity capital in affordable single family or multifamily rental housing. Investors use the tax credits to reduce their tax liabilities on housing projects. This year, millions in tax credit equity has been awarded for housing projects on Montana’s reservations. On the Fort Peck Reservation, the “Old Airport” area in Poplar is being redeveloped for business and residential use. On the Crow Reservation, housing units for homeless veterans of the Crow Nation are under construction. On the Rocky Boy’s Reservation, the Department provided tax credit equity for the acquisition and rehabilitation of 40 single family homes.

Public Transportation—The Montana Department of Transportation provides tribes with funding made available through the Federal Transit Administration for public transportation operations. Last year the Crow, Blackfeet, Fort Peck and the Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes were awarded funding for bus operations that connect their members to the services and businesses they need. These public transportation operations are also accessible to community members who require special assistance in connecting with healthcare and other services.

Tourism Infrastructure Investment—The Tourism Infrastructure Investment Program (TIIP) of the Montana Department of Commerce invests a portion of the state lodging tax fund in tourism facilities throughout the state. In 2014, the Blackfeet Tribe used TIIP funding to upgrade the Chewing Blackbones Campground sewer system, electrical services and the pump house. The Island Mountain Development Group of the Fort Belknap Reservation is using its grant funding to improve the Mission Canyon and Trail recreation area, the Snake Butte recreation area, and the Lodgepole recreation area. The Fort Peck Assiniboine and Sioux Tribes are using TIIP funding to restore the historic Poplar Agency Indian Boarding School for use as a tribal tourism headquarters and interpretive center.

ACCESS TO CAPITAL

Apsaalooke Nation Revolving Loan Fund—With the help of Montana Department of Commerce Indian Country Economic Development (ICED) grants, the Crow Tribe has established the Apsaalooke Nation Revolving Loan Fund. The Fund provides business training and capital to Crow owned businesses operating on the Reservation. This year, the program is working to establish a Native Community Development Financial Institution to increase community investment and access to credit on the Crow Reservation.

Blackfeet Small Business Incubator—The Blackfeet Tribe is using ICED program funding to establish the Blackfeet Small Business Incubator. Services will include business planning for start-ups, grant writing and computer application training, and assistance with loan applications and credit counseling.

Indian Equity Fund—The Indian Equity Fund provides technical assistance and grants to native owned business start-ups growing private sector businesses in their communities. The grants require a dollar to dollar match that can be met through loan funds or business inventory. In 2014, 117 American Indians received technical assistance through the program and 13 grants were awarded to business owners.

Beginning Farm & Ranch Loan Program—The Montana Department of Agriculture’s Beginning Farm & Ranch program is a tax-exempt bond and loan program that assists new farmers and ranchers to acquire agricultural property at low interest rates. In 2014, the Department issued 16 loans worth nearly $500,000 to tribal members on three of Montana’s Indian reservations.

PROMOTING ECONOMIC GROWTH

Revenue Sharing—State tribal tax sharing agreements promote economic growth by preventing the dual taxation of certain economic transactions on Indian reservations. During state fiscal year 2014, sixteen tax sharing agreements covering tobacco, alcohol and motor fuels taxes were in effect with seven tribal governments. In addition, an oil and natural gas tax sharing agreement is currently in effect between the Fort Peck Tribes and the State.

Tribal Employment Rights—The Department of Transportation has Tribal Employment Rights Ordinance (TERO) Memorandums of Understanding in effect with seven tribal governments. These agreements require the department to work and collaborate with tribal TERO offices regarding hiring and other requirements, and to pay a fee to tribal TERO offices based on the department’s projects on each reservation.

The following table shows the amount that tribal government received through tax sharing agreements and TERO fees in state fiscal year 2014.

BETTER EDUCATION

Montana is engaged in a long-term effort spanning multiple departments across state government to improve the education of American Indian students. In this year's report we are proud to feature an initiative that embodies the State's commitment to innovative education in Indian Country: the Montana Indian Language Preservation Pilot Program. We also highlight some of the many programs that exemplify the commitment of Montana to the educational success of Indian students, both on and off the reservation.

THE MONTANA INDIAN LANGUAGE PRESERVATION PILOT PROGRAM

Language is the foundation of cultural endurance. It binds communities together and shapes our perception of the world. When an Indian child grows up speaking her own language, she is at once part of an ancient chain of knowledge and a promise of the future vitality of her people. It is estimated that at the time of European contact five and a half centuries ago, there were some 1,800 indigenous languages spoken in the Western Hemisphere. With the collapse in indigenous populations after European contact, there followed a collapse in the number of indigenous languages. In the United States, this incalculable loss accelerated in the 1800s and early 1900s pursuant to government policies designed to erase tribal identity. Residential Indian boarding schools and Indian relocation programs to the major cities were an assault on Indian languages, such that by the 1960's less than 175 languages were still in existence in the United States, with many having just a handful of fluent speakers.

The loss of an Indian language means more than the loss of a means of communication. Indian languages are a repository of traditional knowledge, customary laws, and religious beliefs. The loss of Indian languages has played an especially destructive role in the cultural upheaval forced upon Indian peoples, with consequences lasting generations. The return of thriving, widely-spoken Indian languages is central to the efforts of Indian Nations as they work to improve the lives of their people. In Montana, the tribal colleges and a small number of early childhood language immersion schools have worked tirelessly with fluent elders to carry languages forward. As fluent speakers dwindle, however, the task becomes more urgent. The late Darrell Kipp, a steadfast leader in protecting Indian languages and co-founder of the Piegan Language Institute on the Blackfeet Reservation, explained the urgency of language loss by stating, “There are two intersecting lines. One is the number of years our fluent speakers have left, and the other is the amount of time it takes to produce new speakers. When those lines no longer intersect, we’ll have lost our language—forever.”

Early in his administration, Governor Bullock met with tribal leaders and language preservation advocates. After listening to tribal leaders speak of the vital importance of language preservation, the Governor acted, throwing his full support behind Senate Bill 342—the Montana Indian Language Preservation Pilot Program. On May 5, 2013, the Governor signed the pilot program into law, creating an historic partnership between the State of Montana, tribal educators and organizations, and tribal governments. The program is administered through the State Tribal Economic Development Commission (STEDC) at the Department of Commerce. By leveraging the $2 million in state funding assigned to the program, Montana’s tribes now have new resources and tools to revitalize the Indian languages that, since time immemorial, have been the cultural sanctuary and memory of Montana’s first peoples.

The language preservation activities thus far designed and implemented through the program are as diverse as the tribes of Montana. Activities range from the development of mobile applications for personal devices to road signs and sound books. Language teams are developing and publishing comprehensive curriculum and technology based materials including interactive dictionaries available through the internet, DVD’s and e-lessons. Using platforms available through the internet, these learning tools can be accessed through devices that are becoming more available in Indian Country and will increase the frequency young learners’ exposure to Indian languages. In total Montana’s tribes are now working to create over 50 major projects and deliverables.

IN MEMORIAM

DARRELL ROBES KIPP

Montana suffered a tremendous loss with the passing of Blackfeet leader Darrell Robes Kipp, in November of 2013. Mr. Kipp advocated his entire life for the Blackfeet people, the Blackfeet Nation, and the Blackfeet language. He held degrees from Eastern Montana College, the Harvard Graduate School of Education, and Vermont College. In addition to being a national trailblazer in the effort to preserve indigenous languages, Mr. Kipp was a documentary filmmaker, a linguist, a writer, and most of all, a teacher. He taught many with honesty, humor, optimism and a focused sense of mission. In 1987, he co-founded the Piegan Institute to revitalize the Blackfeet language. The Institute’s Cuts Wood Academy has become a model for indigenous language immersion schools throughout the country. His leadership, wisdom and guidance will be greatly missed.

Indian languages have roots going back tens of thousands of years. While countless languages are gone forever, tribal leaders, elders, advocates and educators working over many years have kept languages from disappearing in Montana. Over the course of 2013 and 2014, the State of Montana joined in that effort. Although the task is enormous, the pilot program now being implemented is a crucial step towards ensuring Montana's first languages have a future as long and vibrant as their past.

INNOVATION THAT IS RESHAPING EDUCATION IN MONTANA

Early Edge—In 2014 Governor Bullock launched his Early Edge campaign to bring high-quality, universally available, early childhood education to Montana's 4-year olds. If passed by the 2015 state legislature, the program will work alongside existing Head Start programs to provide quality pre-K learning environments throughout Montana, including Montana's Indian reservations.

Breakfast after the Bell—The Governor and First Lady Lisa Bullock launched Breakfast after the Bell in 2014 to increase participation in school breakfast programs. School breakfast programs reduce childhood hunger and improve student achievement. Through the program schools can receive grants to create breakfast programs.

Best Beginnings STARS to Quality—Through the Best Beginnings STARS to Quality program, participating early childhood education programs receive coaching and support through the Montana Department of Public Health and Human Services to achieve their identified curriculum, professional and other improvement goals. The Blackfeet Community Child Care Center and the Salish Kootenai College Child Care Center participate in the program.

Schools of Promise—2014 marks the final year of an intensive Office of Public Instruction program to improve the educational outcomes of students in three reservation school systems: Frazer High School, Lame Deer 7-12, and Pryor/Plenty Coup K-12. Program results include increased reading and math proficiency, more positive school climates, strong staff evaluation systems, improved infrastructure, greater student and family participation, and improved school board leadership.

SUBSTANCE ABUSE MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES ADMINISTRATION WRAP-AROUND SERVICES

The ability to learn is very often shaped by the hardships that so seriously impact many American Indian students. In 2013, the Montana Office of Public Instruction received a $1.8 million, four-year Substance Abuse Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) grant to improve and expand “wrap-around” mental health services for Indian youth and families. The “wrap-around” approach brings together agencies and organizations serving children and families to create focused treatment planning for individuals in need. It is an integrated method of working with children and families which includes community partners like the public school system. The SAMHSA grant is being used in four tribal communities located on the Fort Peck, Crow and Northern Cheyenne reservations. Throughout the grant timeframe, the OPI will (1) expand the delivery of wrap-around services in the communities of Wyola, Pryor, Lane Deer and Frazer; (2) establish interagency agreements with local providers and programs for the coordinated, community-level delivery of services; and (3) develop a statewide network of youth and family advocates with the common interest of improving mental health services delivery to tribal youth.

The program is part of a seven-year U.S. Department of Education grant to the Office of the Commissioner of Higher Education that will provide approximately 5,800 American Indian students with rigorous academic curricula, dropout prevention, financial aid education and college and career services.

EFFECTIVE GOVERNMENT

A strong relationship between the State and Tribal governments of Montana is central to the well-being of Indian and non-Indian citizens alike. In this section, we highlight efforts of the state government to improve its functioning in Indian Country through communication, consultation and coordination.

THE AFFORDABLE CARE ACT IN INDIAN COUNTRY

The effective delivery of health care in Indian Country is essential to reducing the stark disparities in health and wellness between Indian and non-Indian Montanans. On average in Montana American Indian men die 19 years earlier than non-Indian men. Indian women die 20 years earlier than non-Indian women. American Indians also outpace non-Indians in chronic diseases like diabetes, cancer and heart disease. The Affordable Care Act increases access to health care in Indian Country. In an effort to inform tribal members about the Affordable Care Act and the many provisions that are specific to American Indians, a statewide tour focusing on Indian Country took place in early 2014 just prior to the “open enrollment” deadline of March 31, 2014.

Outreach events were held in each tribal community on each of the seven Indian reservations in Montana and in urban areas with high populations of Americans Indians. In collaboration with tribal communities, these events provided a chance for members to hear from the panelists about how the new law directly impacts enrolled and non-enrolled tribal members, dispel myths and explain the basics of the law.

Following the panel presentation, individuals were able to sit down with certified application counselors, navigators and marketplace insurance representatives to learn more about Montana’s health insurance marketplace, create an account, review insurance coverage and prices, or complete any required exemption forms.

This collaborative effort, between the Department of Public Health and Human Services, Indian Health Service, the Office of the Commissioner of Securities and Insurance, tribal governments and tribal colleges provided a great forum to address the many questions surrounding the Affordable Care Act.

"We need everyone engaged in this discussion because it affects not only tribal governments but our families, friends, and neighbors." Lesa Evers, Tribal Relations Manager, Department of Public Health and Human Services

The panel discussions included a presentation from Commissioner of Securities and Insurance Monica Lindeen about the basics of the law and the role her office plays in implementation of the Act. Anna Whiting Sorrell, then Billings Indian Health Service Area Director, spoke about the new opportunities with third party billing and the importance of collections to bring much needed revenue into the Indian Health care system. Lesa Evers, Tribal Relations Manager at the Montana Department of Public Health and Human Services, talked about why it is important for individuals to engage and learn all the facts they can to make informed choices about health insurance for their families.

The tour included Montana's seven Indian reservations and the Little Shell Tribe in Great Falls, and outreach efforts to Urban Indian Health Centers in Billings, Great Falls, and Missoula over the course of three months.

MAKING SURE THE INDIAN VOICE IS HEARD

Tribal Leaders Summit—On May 8, 2014, Governor Steve Bullock hosted the annual Tribal Leaders Summit at the State Capitol to honor the government-to-government relationship between the State and Tribal Nations of Montana. The event involved over 25 tribal dignitaries and staff representing the eight tribal governments in Montana. Discussions focused on improving the delivery of state services, promoting increased tribal access to state grants, legislative proposals, and various state-tribal agreements.

American Indian Appointments to Boards and Commissions—

Over 200 boards, councils and commissions help guide and operate state government agencies. Governor Bullock is working to make sure that American Indians have a say in the critical decisions these boards and councils make. Throughout his tenure as Governor, the number of American Indian appointees to state boards and commissions has steadily increased. There are now 131 American Indians lending their voice to the hard work accomplished by these boards and commissions.

Tribal Relations Training—The State of Montana works every day with tribal governments and native communities. To ensure this work is effective, the Governor's Office of Indian Affairs provides annual training to state employees concerning state-tribal policies, as well as tribal priorities, history and culture. The event has grown in size over the past years, and in 2013 it attracted over 300 participants. Key-note speaker Mark Trahant, Shoshone-Bannock tribal member and an acclaimed author and journalist, told the story of the late Assistant Secretary of Interior for Indian Affairs Forrest Gerard and his fight to pass the pivotal Indian Self-Determination Act of 1975.

Prevention and Control of Wildfires—The Montana Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) entered into an agreement with the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) and the Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes (CSKT) for the prevention and control of wildfires that occur on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Under the agreement the CSKT and the BIA provide wildfire prevention and control on state and private lands within the Reservation. The agreement is a mutually beneficial and cost effective approach to wildfire suppression.

Tribal Court/Tribal Advocacy Training—Following the success of the 2013 Tribal Court Training, the Montana Department of Justice, in partnership with the U.S. Attorney's Office and the Bureau of Indian Affairs, co-sponsored the 2014 Tribal Court/Tribal Advocacy Training. The training took place in Helena from May 20-22. Participants included tribal court judges, attorneys and lay advocates from Montana's Tribal Nations, as well as from Oregon, South Dakota and Oklahoma. The training included presentations by the Montana Crime Lab with a special emphasis on state-tribal cooperation.

Safe On All Roads

—The Montana Department of Transportation initiated the Safe On All Roads (SOAR) program to reduce highway fatalities on Montana's reservations through community education and outreach. Through the program, Tribes receive funding to implement their own education programs to increase seat belt use and reduce impaired driving.

During 2014, a teen traffic safety campaign was launched to encourage teens to buckle up. The campaign used local teens to serve as spokespersons through various media, including billboards, posters and radio advertising.

Sweat lodge and Rehabilitation—The Montana Department of Corrections recognizes the importance of traditional practices in the rehabilitation of American Indians in the corrections system. Each year the Religious Activity Center at the Montana State Prison rebuilds the sweat lodge under the supervision of the Department's American Indian Liaison Harlan Trombley and Religious Activity Specialist Russell Danaher. This year's activity was honored by the presence of Northern Cheyenne Tribal Vice-President Winfield Russell, and tribal elders Frank Longjaw Sr. and Calvin Brady, who assisted in building the lodge according to tradition.

Tribal Historic Preservation Summit—The State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO), a program within the Montana Historical Society, co-sponsored with the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) a summit of all Tribal Historic Preservation Officers in the State. The Nez Perce Tribe attended as well. The summit, held in Helena on May 20 – 21, 2014, focused on consultation procedures and specific state and federal agency issues. Approximately 65 attendees were present. The meeting was the most recent of three summits organized by SHPO with much tribal support and enthusiasm.

APPENDICES

The State of Montana is engaged in a multitude of activities involving the eight tribal governments in the state. The comprehensive lists provided in the following three appendices demonstrate the prominence of American Indians serving on State boards, councils and commissions; outline the overall work done in cooperation with tribes; and provide useful contact information within state government.

APPENDIX A:

AMERICAN INDIANS SERVING MONTANA

Montana's state government functions in a way designed to offer many opportunities for public involvement, including citizen-led boards. We are fortunate to have so many people willing to serve on hundreds of boards, councils and commissions. These dedicated appointees speak for all Montanans to ensure that government works for the people and puts the public interest on the forefront of the decision making process.

Currently, over 200 boards, councils and commissions help guide and operate various aspects of government and agencies. They are doing meaningful work by addressing and reviewing issues as varied as the state itself, such as regulating professional occupations, advancing economic development, promoting health and safety, developing educational opportunities, improving access to justice, and encouraging environmental stewardship, to name a few.

Governor Steve Bullock is working to make sure that American Indians take part in these critical decisions and discussions in more ways than ever before. Through his steady increase of American Indians appointments since taking office, Montana's first residents continue to be a driving force for our great state, now and for years to come. American Indians are serving in so many ways—some representing their own Indian Nation and community; others bringing their professional expertise or personal interest in a given field to represent all Montanans. A complete list of 131 American Indians currently serving is provided in Appendix A of this report.

The comprehensive inventory of the cooperative work between the State of Montana and the tribal governments is provided in Appendix B. The data was generated from the State Tribal Activities Database information administered by the Governor's Office and maintained in collaboration with state agencies.
